With acclaimed restaurants like Wolfgang Puck's Spago, Jean-Georges Beverly Hills, and the recently Michelin-starred Gucci Osteria, this city has some of the toughest reservations to snag in Los Angeles County. As the restaurant industry bounces back in Southern California, a number of new restaurants opened to rave reviews in Beverly Hills. A few of these newer gastronomical hot spots include modern-Mexican eatery Mirame, sustainable steak restaurant Matū, and Mediterranean-tapas restaurant Tatal (backed by Rafael Nadal and Cristiano Ronaldo). This year, Beverly Hills will welcome Daniel Boulud's first West Coast outpost at the Mandarin Oriental Residences, a new Jon and Vinny's, and the long-awaited return of chef Curtis Stone's Maude restaurant.

Noteworthy Arts and Culture

You can't visit Beverly Hills without stopping at the iconic Rodeo Drive for a little retail therapy. From precious jewels at Tiffany & Co. to the new Veniroe storefront to extravagant threads at staples like Gucci Beverly Hills and Versace, there is no end to the luxury goods you can secure on this famous street. In addition to clothing, shoes, and accessories, Beverly Hills is quickly becoming a leader in the luxury art scene. A new Sotheby's Auction House located just off Rodeo Drive opened late last year, and the West Coast edition of contemporary art fair Frieze will be held in Beverly Hills from Feb. 17-20. Art aficionados can also enjoy more than 70 pieces of public art that are scattered throughout Beverly Hills' streets, parks, and gardens.

With all of the exciting additions coming to Beverly Hills this year, travelers should make a point to visit the new and improved luxury enclave on their next West Coast vacation. After all, everyone deserves to live like the stars — even if only for a few days.
